The JAHRBUCH DER DEUTSCHEN BIBLIOTHEKEN harks back to a plan of Paul Schwenke's which the then president of the Verein Deutscher Bibliothekare (association of German librarians) proposed on the second "librarian day" at Gotha in 1901. Since the appearance of the first year's issues in 1902, the essential contents of this publication — index of libraries, index of science library officers, appointments and proceedings, library statistics, news of the association of German librarians — have remained unchanged. Thus the JAHRBUCH DER DEUTSCHEN BIBLIOTHEKEN has become an important source of information on the development of German libraries since the turn of the century and a reliable guide for all those who are interested in matters concerning German libraries.
